

WOULD YOU LIKE TO LEARN THE SKILLS OF ARCHAEOLOGICAL EXCAVATION?
...IN IRELAND?
...IN A UNIQUE ARCHAEOLOGICAL LANDSCAPE?

YES? THEN HERE IS YOUR CHANCE...

The Caherconnell Archaeological Field School was established in 2010 in the Burren region of western Ireland. In partnership with the National University of Ireland, Galway, the School provides participants with high-quality archaeological training. Participants also experience authentic Irish life, through daily interaction with the local community.

This field school offers the opportunity to excavate sites that are highly significant to Irish archaeology, sites that are rich in finds. The story of Caherconnell is a complex one, stretching from the Neolithic (Stone Age) right through to modern times.

The Field School excavations are gradually unravelling the secrets of this extraordinary place.
